James Halliday Australian Wine Companion 2018

This is always a deliciously endearing wine of a bouncy, ample, creamy and curdy disposition, given thrust by a skein of bright acidity, keeping it all on the straight and narrow. There are allusions to stone fruits, but more to baked apple, hay and pear; a whiff of white flower and fern. Some cinnamon oak cuts a gentle swathe across the wine mid-drift to its aft, providing gentle guidelines. A nice drink.

Vibrant and stylish, with a creamy, faintly nutty bouquet of peach, bubblegum, and grapefruit lifted by scents of fresh white flowers. It's long and gentle, with a lively, persistent core of stonefruit and citrus backed by creamy, nutty complexity and wrapped in a soft but refreshing ruby grapefruit acidity.

Back in my Best Cellars days, I had a colleague/mate who would pretty much go through a six pack of this a week as his staffies, let alone the beer that was always sitting in the ice chest, ready for his necking pleasure. He just loved this stuff. It's been reliably good to drink over the years, even outside my buddy's approach to it. On target for a comfortable mesh of chardonnay fruit flavour and a racier acid line running through the wine. Sits well in glass with its green apple, nectarine, sandalwood and faint fern-herbal character. The palate is edgy in its texture, like a starched sheet, long though, and offers layers of fruit and gentle savouriness. Very pleasant stuff here.
