

Port Phillip Estate Shiraz 2013 – Reviews

James Halliday Australian Wine Companion 2016

Campbell Mattinson

Smoky, spicy, reductive shiraz, won't be for everyone but the silken mid-palate and insistence of flavour and tannin through the finish will woo many. Light on its feet but surprisingly powerful.

Cold fried onion like reduction, hence the need for a decant to open the wine up. The palate is well constructed, silky medium bodied tannins and medium long with roasted meats dark savoury flavours.

This is, I think, a good example of what Mattinson calls an 'Enthusiast's Wine'.

Open last night very sullen, stinky and reductive, so I left it well alone. A day later and the perfume has come out, and the wine looks much better. Black fruit, char grilled meat heavy with cracked pepper, lavender perfume. Medium bodied, distinctly meaty and spicy, with well packed fine grained tannin, even acidity and a spray of herbs and more char grilled meat on the finish. It has fruit, but it's pretty dry and confronting. Almost bitter amaro herb and smokiness in the aftertaste. Hard to rate, but will surely push the buttons of some.
