

Port Phillip Estate Shiraz 2016 – Reviews

The Age, The Good Food Section, February 2019

Hotter seasons like 2016 flavour shiraz in this cool location. Deep colour with a powerful, concentrated pepper and spice fragrance. The wine is elegant, with savoury, drying tannins. It's surprisingly full-bodied considering the region.

It sees whole bunches, it's wild yeast fermented, it's from a tiny patch of estate vineyard, and it's bottled unfiltered and unfiltered. Ultra fine tannin. Boysenberry and black cherry flavours. Nutty oak, overlaid with cream. And stretches of black pepper and dried bunches of herbs. It's ripe but fluid, clearly influenced by whole bunches but essentially fruit driven, and then ribbed with spice-studded tannin. Cool climate shiraz, and indeed whole bunch shiraz, will need to be your 'go' but it's an excellent example of this style of wine.

Layers of stewed plum and a hint of black pepper spice on the nose. In the mouth, the wine has a beautiful fruit weight, plum with a touch of new leather, and lovely fine-grained tannins. Well balanced.
