

Port Phillip Estate Sauvignon 2018 – Reviews

James Halliday Australian Wine Companion 2020

David Bicknell

Light straw and bright. Very much in fume in style. Hints of reduction and flint, then passionfruit, greengage and salad greens. Almost into musk. And its textural, powerful and rich too, with just enough white stone fruit phenolic crunch to hold it all together.

This has been on an excellent run of form and it continues here. It's all about power, and texture. Once you have the power, you build the texture. Tropical fruit, passionfruit, guava, lemongrass, even grapefruit; all such flavours blink through the palate. It also has a gravelly, smoky edge, which is entirely a positive. This wine saw some old wood, and it did it some good. Excellent white wine.
