

Port Phillip Estate Morillon Pinot Noir 2018 – Reviews

---

WineFront, February 2020

Campbell Mattinson

Excellent flow and flavour. White peach mostly but with chalk, cream, honeysuckle and toasty, flinty cedar wood. It has good volume but still manages to feel elegant, particularly through the back half. It's good now and it will develop nicely over the next handful of years.

93+ points

Young Gun of Wine Top 50

Panel includes a host of Australia's most respected wine critics, food journalists & sommeliers

There's plenty of flavour here, but with plenty of restraint, too. There's a white peach note and hints of yellow nectarine, with a savoury kernel character coming through. A sensible lick of oak plays on the nose and palate, with a savoury strictness to the mouthfeel, but it's impeccably in balance, with the occasional toasty flicker. Although there is real fruit intensity here, there's no sweet spot, just a nicely contained sense of concentration in harmony with linear direction.