

Port Phillip Estate Morillon Pinot Noir 2019 – Reviews

James Halliday's Top 100 – 20 Reds over $40

James Halliday

Sourced from a 0.4ha patch of the oldest estate plantings. Gloriously fragrant and flowery bouquet with a spray of red fruits, the palate a perfect replay of red berries and pomegranate.

Juicy, cherry and rosy characters abound. Fragrant, pretty, light to taste with a lot of spread of fruit flavour and cool red apple-meets-amaro acidity. Super gentle, understated, but oh that beautiful texture gets you. Tannins come late, soft, but present. Has an excellent feel.

This pinot from a single 0.4ha block of the oldest plantings at Port Phillip Estate is strikingly fresh. Aromas of raspberry and leafy herbs carry a tightly spiced thread. On the palate, this bends from raspberry to red and blackcurrant-like flavours. Wrapped in tight at the finish.

So tightly wound it reveals very little at first. Coaxing it out takes time – a decanter at the very least is needed. Sweet black cherries dipped in baking spices, Angostura bitters and whole-bunch flavours infuse the palate. It's fuller bodied but not big, although there are tannins aplenty and somewhat drying on the finish. Cellar for a few years before coming back to it.

Medium to deep red colour with a tinge of purple. The bouquet is different, with lifted raspberry and vegetal scents, the palate sweetly grapy in a raspberry kind of way, straightforward but of good intensity and depth, and concluding with well-judged firmness from tannins.
