

Quartier Chardonnay 2021 – Reviews

The Real Review, March 2022

A pale lemon-yellow hue. Fruit-driven on the nose, apples and peaches with a hint of lemon thyme as well. Fresh and vibrant on the palate; the fruit sits high and bright with a good crunch of acidity. It carries good length and the drive to the finish shows more saline-mineral characters. Good value here.

A juicy little number here. All ripe pear, stonefruit, discreet oak spice, and a distinct aniseed perfume. Plenty of flavour, again peach and pear, along with a gentle chalky texture, balanced acidity, and a dried pear and cinnamon in the aftertaste. Affable. Easy to enjoy.

Cracking Mornington Peninsula Chardonnay for under $30. The grapes are whole-bunch pressed into a combination of French oak barriques (of which 8% are new) and stainless-steel tanks. After fermentation, eight months on lees, without bâtonnage and then bottled with minimal filtration and no fining. Pale yellow in colour, there are notes of spices, rockmelons, nuts and riverstones. Good concentration here, and length. This is ripe and with the most appealing seamless palate. Should drink very well over the next two to four years. Lots to like here.
