

Port Phillip Estate Red Hill Pinot Noir 2023 – Reviews

Wine Pilot, May 2024

Highly fragrant and perfumed, revealing aromas of sour cherry and light strawberry. Follows the low intervention approach adopted at Port Phillip Estate which results in wines that present beautifully almost pristine fruit characters. There is power here, though, with a focussed persistence

Complex aromas of briar, sap, spice, underbrush, cherry, blueberry and earth. Soft, mouth-filling, layered and complex on the palate. There's a core of red and blue fruits, along with a wild brambly edge and Asian spice. The tannins are round, firm and shapely and the acidity delivers cut.

Produced by the same winemaking team as the Kooyong wines, made in the same winery, but the fruit sources are quite different. This is from a vineyard planted in the late 1980s 'up the hill', in the deep red volcanic soil 140 metres above sea level on Red Hill. Ambient-yeast ferment in stainless steel and large-format wood, 12% whole bunch. Matured for 11 months in barrique and puncheon, 15% new.

Despite being made in an almost identical way to PPE's Balnarring Pinot, this could not be more different: pale, translucent red in colour, bursting with of pretty, floral, fine, red-fruited aromas. It's elegant and fine and bright in the mouth, with powdery tannins.
