

Port Phillip Estate Salasso Rosé 2025 – Reviews

The WineFront, March 2026

Gary Walsh

It's business as usual for Salasso, albeit with perhaps a little extra chalky grip to texture. Red fruits, blood orange, a little spice and dried herb. It has some brightness mixed with a nutty and somewhat umami character, and finishes with a twist of amaro and good length. Has a bit of weight and presence too. Good. Ever reliable.

It's a dusty bronze and bright. Juicy and tangy with pops of red berries, lemon barley water, musk and red lollies, too. Plenty of refreshing, lively acidity drives this to a decent finish. Quite moreish, too.

Pale onion-skin pink with fragrant peach melba aromas and wet pebble minerality. Dry, creamy on the palate with a zing of zesty acidity, and savoury steeliness driving to the finish. Vibrant and precise.
