Bellvale Chardonnay 2025

Reviews

We have a winner here. This is crisp, elegant, textural and long, and throughout it just simply tastes good. It's as good or better than any Bellvale Chardonnay I've had previous. It tastes of pears, nectarines, oyster shells and grapefruit, with hay, cedar and toast notes layered over the top – the latter in the most subtle way possible. If this is a sign of things to come from the Bellvale vineyard, under new ownership, then we have a lot to look forward to.

Pale gold in the glass. Baked peach and lemon blossom aromas lead the nose, with vanilla, cedar and smoked almond oak. Textural and ripe, saline with zesty acidity, the oak a touch charry on the finish.

Kooyong/Port Phillip Estate bought this established property just before vintage 2025, and while there's work to be done to bring it back to tip-top shape, the inaugural releases are solid. Plenty to enjoy with this fresh and appealing wine, from its stone fruit and citrus to lemon curd and spicy oak flavours. Everything is in sync and balance. It's not overly complex, but there's fine acidity and a little phenolic tug to add shape. A lovely drink.
